The Anglican primer issued by Henry VII in 1545, and its successors, were rooted in a long tradition of such books, which were also known as books of hours. They had been produced both in manuscript form and as printed books.

Here, as a research tool, I offer a list of printed primers and books of hours included in the ProQuest database, Early English Books Online. No such book is listed for 1543, and such books from 1544 to 1560 are listed in a separate bibliography.

The information given comes from Early English Books Online, though the data are somewhat reorganized and sometimes simplified. The STC (short title catalogue, second edition) and year of publication come first, following by the title. Place of publication and printer are given next, and pagination follows. If a facsimile is not provided, this is noted.
